STONE MAKES BUSINESS STATEMENT ABOUT WHITFIELD

Delta Planter and Legislator Made Statement at Rally in Jackson.

Hon. Alf Stone, one of the State's most prominent legislative members and one of the largest planters in the delta, made a business statement for Gov.-elect Whitfield that shows that the new Governor expects to counsel with the State's best man and that he holds views regarding the business affairs of Mississippi that meet the approval with the best thought of the Democratic party of the State. Mr. Stone's statement was made at the rally in Jackson a few nights after the first primary. He said:

"I am not here to ask anything, either for my section, my friends or myself. The people of Mississippi have nothing which I want, save only their confidence, their respect and their good will. This much I hope I have already. My section, the Mississippi delta, although paying substantially one-fourth of all the ad valorem revenue collected by the state, is not here, either through me or any other man, to ask favors, to drive political bargains or to make political deals. All the delta asks is a square deal, and it is in itself a tribute to Mr. Whitfield that we know with absolute certainty that we shall receive a square deal at his hands because of the character of the man. We do not have to bargain for it in advance.

"In this connection I am authorized by Mr. Whitfield to say that he not only believes in the fundamental justice of home rule, of local self-government, as a matter of principle, but he is willing to apply it in practice. I am authorized to say that as governor he will favor a constitutional amendment giving the people of the delta the right to say by their own ballots who shall administer the affairs of the levee boards, who shall collect their levee taxes and who shall spend them. This will not only be a long-delayed act of political justice, but it will also remove from the governor's control a power which he should not exercise under our system of government.

"It is charged that Mr. Whitfield has had no business experience in large affairs. I am authorized to say to you that if elected he will invite a committee of practical Delta cotton planters, men who have made a success of their own affairs, men of large practical experience, to make a first hand study of the state's largest business enterprise, the penitentiary farm, and advise with him and with the penitentiary trustees as to the most practical means of so handling that institution as to increase its productivity. He knows that the ten years between 1913 and 1922 have been marked by a decline of 50 per cent in the state's cotton crop, notwithstanding increased acreage and increased expense. He, furthermore, authorizes me to assure you that he will not use the position of penitentiary superintendent as a political pawn or a means of discharging a political debt. Mr. Whitfield has no political debts to discharge. The people who are supporting him are doing so as a patriotic duty, not in the furtherance of a private enterprise. The same thing is true of all other offices and institutions in the state. He proposes to obtain all the advice and information possible from those charged with their administration, and from every available source, and formulate policies which shall wisely and economically further their interests, without being either niggardly or extravagant. But Mr. Whitfield does not propose to play the role of dictator. He knows that this is Mississippi, not Mexico. Hence, he recognizes the fact that in the last analysis the duty and responsibility of providing for the state's institutions, under our constitution and laws, rest with the legislative branch of the government, whose functions he has no desire to usurp.

"Under his administration the state board of health will not be subjected to executive domination and the health of the people will not be made a football of politics.

"Mr. Whitfield will further, to the extent of legitimate executive authority, the development of Mis-

COTTON GROWING IN ILLINOIS

Grenadian Visits 30 Acre Crop Near Cairo.

J. B. Perry was exhibiting in Grenada a few days ago a well grown and well bolted stalk of cotton which he pulled from a thirty acre cotton field about ten miles north of Cairo. Mr. Perry was invited out to the farm and the owner of the cotton field stated that he had never before had any experience with cotton, but that he just concluded he would try the experiment this year, and thus far he is pleased. There were no boll weevils or other pests in the cotton and from what Mr. Perry states, a crop of at least two-thirds of a bale to the acre may be counted on.

There can hardly be much doubt about the fact that if the weevil continues to prey upon southern cotton crops, new sections will embark in the cotton raising business which will greatly interfere with an industry upon which, until the appearance of the boll weevil, the South had a practical monopoly. Already Great Britain is experimenting with cotton raising in some of her possessions to an extent never tried before. The world needs cotton. It can use profitably some twenty million bales, all told.

Mr. Perry stated, in reference to the Illinois cotton, that that locality was but a few days ahead of this section with its first frost and that the temperature there was but about four degrees lower than in Mississippi.

These matters are worthy of the serious reflection of the cotton farmers. The boll weevil, it seems, is about the only pest that ever got by the agencies which the federal government set up to destroy, but it is yet believed that some way will be found to circumvent its ravages. The seasons in Mississippi, and indeed in a large part of the cotton belt, have been very adverse to a full cotton crop, regardless of the boll weevil, for several years.

DR. J. W. YOUNG URGES POSTPONEMENT

Thinks Business Condition Warrants Delay in Paving.

Dr. J. W. Young appeared before the City Council Monday night and urged upon that body the advisability of postponement of street paving. The doctor spoke of the almost total failure in the cotton crop and the almost equally as poor corn crop which, he said, made business conditions anything but bright for Grenada and immediate territory, all of which, he said, admonished against an outlay by the citizens of Grenada of anything like $175,000 at the present time.

And not the least of these he has the vision to see is the potential magnitude of the water power which is now going to waste. Enough hydro-electric power can be developed in South Mississippi and in the northern part of the state to turn every bale of Mississippi cotton into cloth and have sufficient electrical energy left to develop countless other manufacturing enterprises.

"Mr. Whitfield is in favor of building up the state by extending a helping hand to outside industries and inviting them to share our opportunities.

"Mr. Whitfield is anxious to stop waste and to avoid extravagance. He favors the sale of such of the state's farm property as cannot be made productive. He favors a policy of intelligent liberality toward the state's experiment stations, to the end of increasing their usefulness to the agriculture of the state.

"The programme which I have here briefly outlined seems to me to be eminently sane. And there is no shadow of question of Mr. Whitfield's honest desire and earnest determination to carry it into practical effect. For my own part, I have no desire other than to be of such service as I can to the state and her people. As I see the matter, in this posture of our affairs, the greatest service which I can render Mississippi is to support Henry L. Whitfield for governor. And this I do ungrudgingly, whole heartedly and without conditions or reservations, but with confidence and faith.

PURPOSELESS EDUCATION

The schools begin a new term within the next two weeks. Thoughts of school are uppermost in the minds of young people at this time. It can hardly be said that they are all thrilled over the prospect, because no normal boy or girl who has run wild during the summer months contemplates a return to work and confinement with any degree of pleasure. Occasionally there are notable examples of parlor-reared prodigies who can scarcely restrain their enthusiasm over the thought of return to the schoolroom and books, but these are the prodigies and not the representatives of the great mass of sunburned and stone-bruised boys who anticipate school with the same pleasure with which they would receive the approach of a long spell of sickness.

Education is something to be desired in after years, but not in youth. It is a thing that must be administered. Few boys take to it as naturally as they take to a swimming hole. The theory of education is something that has never been definitely decided on. Education is a purposeless thing, too often measured by the number of years spent in attaining it, with too little attention given to what is absorbed during the impressionable years. The average boy is educated because he is obedient to his parents, but the parents themselves seldom have any definite idea of what they are educating the boy for or why.

Education was the subject of a discussion among some gentlemen at luncheon a few days ago. Each had boys in school, were endeavoring to give them the benefits of education, but without any definite goal. This fact was commented on and produced a description of the experience of each of the parents. Their own parents had not undertaken to shape their careers, and they floundered around and wasted a good many years before centering on anything definite. Two of the men were reared on farms. One conceived the idea of becoming a minister. Most of the ministers come from the country. There may be a reason for it. The minister is about the only person the country boy comes in contact with who has no work to do. The more the country boy meditates on the apparently easy life of the minister the more disposed he is to follow his footsteps. As the heat of summer increases, the idea of becoming a minister reaches the point of a conviction which sometimes is described as a call. The call is loud and irresistible around laying-by time.

The gentleman in question, accustomed to working in the fields until late in the evening, going home tired and weary and finding the minister on the front porch, comfortable and serene, and then having to kill a few chickens for the minister's repast, decided that he, too, would study for the ministry, so he went away to college.

He found there a number of other boys who were not going to be farmers, nor were they going to be ministers. After a year or two of vain effort to carry out his original intention, he abandoned the idea and became a clerk in a hardware store. It was after he left college that he learned the value of sticking to a job and doing his work well and directing his efforts toward a definite goal. He succeeded, but the most valuable lesson he learned was not in school.

The second gentleman was essentially a student. He read everything and he studied everything with no purpose except to inform himself, and for many years was in a business where his store of information was of no practical value. He has since found it useful and has occasion to apply his knowledge of various subjects to questions that arise almost daily.

The third member of the party had three or four ideas of what his work in life should be, but he never applied himself to any of them very long, and finally abandoned them all. He is also in a business entirely foreign to any conception he had as a youth.

These men never had any parental assistance. They were not molded for definite careers during the impressionable years. Each might have attained a much higher degree of success had they been given the benefit of advice and a helping hand. The experience of these men perhaps illustrates a prevailing characteristic.

Parents do not undertake to analyze their boys and find their natural bent. The most indulgent father may give his son the advantage of an education and then leave undone the most important thing, which is to help the boy find the thing for which he is fitted.

The number of successful men is relatively small. No man has ever succeeded in a business irksome, laborious and distasteful. Perhaps 90 per cent of the men today are working for a living. The man who finds his place in life does not really work. His work is play. He gets pleasure out of it. He does not need a vacation and diversion is a part of the routine of daily duties. The man who is doing the thing he likes to do and who would not be tempted by an offer to go into any other business is the most fortunate of men. He is to be envied. He is happiest and the most efficient.

Most men find their life work through accident. If accidentally they happen to fall into the thing to which they are adapted, they succeed, not always in a financial sense, but in the sense that they have their reward in the joy to be found in the performance of their task.—News Scimitar.

ABOUT THE ECLIPSE OF THE SUN, SEPTEMBER 10.

The Sentinel clips the following from the N. O. Daily States' "Fire-side Science" column by Ransom Sutton. It is a matter of special interest just now. The eclipse is to take place Monday next:

Beginning at 54 minutes and 23 seconds after 12 o'clock (noon), on Sept. 10, 1923, the coast line of California and a diagonal strip, 150 miles wide across Mexico, will go directly under the moon and remain in total darkness for two and one-half minutes. During that two and one-half minutes the observations of the scientists, who are assembling in Los Angeles from all seats of learning, must be completed; they must be on time, for the "train of events" will not wait upon the luncheon hour.

Never before has such preparations been made. Equipment, costing thousands of dollars, is being installed on segregated peaks and promontories and the work subdivided, in order that the cosmic spectacle may be observed from different angles and nothing be overlooked.

At Catalina Island, which is well within the path of totality, Yerkes Observatory, of the University of Chicago, will make special studies with reference to the Einstein theory; Washburn Observatory, of the University of Wisconsin, will measure the brightness of the corona with photo-electric cells; Goodsell Observatory, of Carleton College, will photograph the star field around the darkened disk and secure "flash spectra" of the flames which leap from the surface of the sun. At Point Loma, near San Diego, the Mount Wilson Observatory and the Leander McCormick Observatory, will make special studies; and at San Clemente Island, the Clark-Baumgardt Eclipse Expedition, using the Clark Observatory, will take motion pictures of the entire eclipse. The Lick Observatory, and the Students' Observatory of the University of California will do their work at Ensenada, Western Mexico. Eclipse expeditions from European countries and South America have established stations along the path of totality, as far as Yucatan.

Some of the known facts about the sun, upon which all the far-seeing telescopes will be focused, are as follows:

Being 866,400 miles in diameter, it is 333,432 times the size of the earth and its gravitational pull, at the surface, 27 1-2 times greater than the earth's. A 150-pound man would weigh 4125 on the sun.

The sun's atmosphere, called the photosphere, consists of a glowing haze, about 1000 miles thick. Outside of the photosphere lies the chromosphere, some 8000 miles thick—a conflagration of gases. During the eclipse of 1919, tongues of flame were seen to shoot out more than 500,000 miles—twice the distance from the earth to the moon. In the "absolute cold" regions of outer space the sun-flames condense and fall back, as other forms of matter, filling the solar atmosphere with flying debris. Eruptions occur continuously, hurling red hot vapors into space, against the sun's tremendous gravity, at a speed of 600 miles a second.

The normal temperature at the surface of the sun is about 6000 degrees centigrade, or 10,832 Fahrenheit; but the eruptions show the interior to be nearer 11,000 centigrade, or 19,832 Fahrenheit. At that degree of heat, every substance known to man would be dissolved into gas—probably hydrogen gas the supposedly primordial element.

Some of the red tongues of flame will be seen over the moon's edge with the naked eye, which means, considering the distance (93,000,000 miles), that they are many times longer than the diameter of the earth. Because of the glare, the corona, or aureole of pearly luminosity can be seen only during a total eclipse.

81 DAYS OF RAIN

Up to and including Sept. 6, it has rained 81 days at Grenada during the year. It is not meant by this that it rained for 81 full days but that it has rained on that many different days. For wetness, the year is remarkable.

REV. J. R. CUNNINGHAM GOES TO GAINESVILLE, FLORIDA

Terminates Four Years' Service With Grenada Presbyterian. Will Be Missed by Entire Community.

Rev. J. R. Cunningham some weeks ago notified the congregation of the Presbyterian Church that he thought he could do a greater work for the Master at Gainesville, Fla. and accordingly he advised them that he would terminate his pastorate of the Grenada church at the end of his four-year period. Mr. Cunningham's announcement brought the keenest regret not only to the people of his own church but to the entire community as well. He served his church diligently, faithfully, ably and well, but his activities have not stopped there. He visited the sick of all denominations and when he learned that anybody needed to be ministered to in holy things, he hastened to carry the message of the Cross and to say and do those beautiful things that gave the distressed courage and made them to feel that they were almost getting a glance into the celestial city.

Mr. Cunningham is a rare pulpit entertainer. His themes are practical and he discusses them with compelling force and with a beautiful pathos. He grips a congregation as few men do. With it all, he is modest and ever considerate of the views of others. He is in no sense dogmatic, nevertheless he holds tenaciously to his interpretation of the Scriptures. He is broad in his views, but in using the word "broad," it is not intended to mean that he is even remotely allied with those who claim to be "discovering" that many things in the Bible are mythical. He is orthodox as orthodox was understood a half century ago.

There is a college of young men at Gainesville which no doubt had much to do with Mr. Cunningham's change of pastorate. He is peculiarly gifted in getting the confidence and the ear of young men and boys and he can be counted on to awaken the highest and the best in the heart of every young fellow who permits Mr. Cunningham to cultivate him. He is a big asset to any city or town.

Mr. Cunningham left Tuesday for his new field of work. The best wishes of Grenada go with him and his lovely wife to their new home. If there is a single individual in the town who does not echo these wishes, the writer is unacquainted with him.

COMPLETE OFFICIAL GRENADA COUNTY VOTE

In last week's Sentinel, the official returns of Grenada were published complete with the exception of the Mr. Nebo vote. Since that time, this box has come in and the following is the official vote of the entire county on state and district offices:

ADDITIONAL NUMBERS IN GOLD DISTRIBUTION

Two awards are yet unclaimed in the second distribution of the $2000 in gold. The holder of number 180361 will be given $10, and the holder of number 063327 will be given $5.00 upon presentation to Miss Estelle Rollins.

FIRST BALE FOR GRENADA

Grenada's first bale of 1923 cotton was brought in late last Thursday by C. W. Spencer and was raised on his place, twelve miles east of Grenada. The bale weighed 412 pounds and was purchased by the Mayor, S. T. Tatum, at 35c. Mr. Tatum purchased the first bale of 1922 cotton which he is still holding.

Queer Feelings

"Some time ago, I was very irregular," writes Mrs. Cora Robie, of Pikeville, Ky. "I suffered a great deal, and knew I must do something for this condition. I suffered mostly with my back and a weakness in my limbs. I would have dreadful headaches. I had hot flashes and very queer feelings, and oh, how my head hurt! I read of Another Mississippi Woman Praises Stella Vitae for Recovery.

"It was a happy day for me when I realized that Stella Vitae was making a well woman of me and I can now enjoy life again," said Mrs. Mrs. Myrtle McDonald, Route 1, Saltillo, Miss.

"Those terrible pains all through my side and back like to have driven me distracted. Even my lower limbs ached so I could hardly get about and I was so weak I could walk with great difficulty, for the least little exertion would wear me out."

"But Stella Vitae has made me feel like a new person. My troubles vanished like clouds before the sun and I am now feeling as well and strong as I ever did in my life, and I owe it all to this wonderful treatment. I am everlastingly grateful for the good it has done me and heartily recommend it to all suffering women."

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

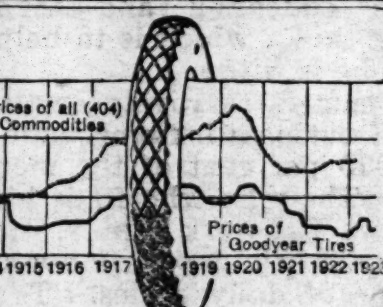

Rev. Guy T. Gillespie, President of Belhaven College at Jackson, will fill the pulpit at the Presbyterian Church next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. Every year, some able minister is invited to preach a sermon preparatory to the opening of the city schools in Grenada and Dr. Gillespie has accepted the invitation for this year. His sermon will be of especial interest to those directly concerned in the welfare of the schools and the public is extended a cordial invitation to hear him.

Illinois Central System Discusses Taxation and Government Ownership

Taxes constitute one of the large single items of expense in providing railway transportation service. Federal, state, county and municipal taxes paid by Class I railroads for 1922 amounted to $300,620,358, an increase of nearly 205 per cent over their 1911 taxes, which were $98,626,848.

The rate at which railway taxes have increased in recent years exceeds the rate of increase in any other item of the cost of providing railway service. If freight and passenger rates had increased on the same scale as taxes from 1911 to 1922, the average passenger fare in 1922 would have been about 6 cents a mile and the average charge for carrying one ton of freight one mile in 1922 would have been about 2½ cents. Instead, the average passenger fare in 1922 was 3.028 cents a mile, an increase since 1911 of only 54 per cent, and the average for carrying one ton of freight one mile in 1922 was 1.176 cents, an increase since 1911 of only 58 per cent.

In the analysis of the Illinois Central System dollar for 1922, recently published, it was shown that 6.89 cents of every dollar received were required to pay the system's taxes last year, as compared with only 4.44 cents devoted to dividends. The various governments collecting taxes—federal, state, county and municipal—received about 55 per cent more revenue from the operations of the Illinois Central System in 1922 than its owners did.

Comparatively few of our citizens openly favor government ownership of the railroads. However, many of them are advocating a substantial reduction in freight and passenger rates. Some are espousing the cause of restoring the right of the forty-eight states to make rates in conflict with interstate rates. Others favor confiscating railway property by scaling down values unreasonably. Those who seek thus to hamper the railroads are simply playing into the hands of the advocates of government ownership. Making it more and more difficult for railroads to exist under private ownership is recognized as the only method through which government ownership of the railroads is likely to be brought about.

The federal government does not tax its own property. The states do not tax the property of the federal government. They could not do so in the case of government-owned railroads, just as they cannot tax the property of government-owned postoffices or forts or arsenals. If the railroads should become the property of the federal government, there would be destroyed a source of tax revenue which in 1922 amounted to more than $300,000,000. From what source would the federal government, states, counties and municipalities make up this lost revenue?

It is not reasonable to expect that lower railway rates would compensate the people for their governments' loss of tax revenue. In the light of our own experience during federal control and the experience which foreign countries have had, there is every reason to believe that government ownership of the railroads would result in large deficits, which would also have to be made up by increased taxation. There can be no reasonable doubt that the effect of government ownership would be higher freight and passenger rates, poorer service and increased taxation.

Constructive criticism and suggestions are invited.

The Lot Sold for Taxes

By JOHN PALMER

(© 1928, Western Newspaper Union.)

THAT little lot at the corner of Ninth street was going to make John Bentley's fortune some day. He had tolled—he and Polly—on the little farm to save the few hundreds required; now the lot was his, but Polly was dead and he had no further interest in life.

Mechanically, he drudged away, and gradually, as the shock of his loss began to lessen, he took up the routine of life again. He was a lonely man, without a relative in the world. Whom was he working for? It was in part the working instinct, just to labor. Dimly he envisaged a future of ease when the lot had increased to a value that would enable him to retire from the farm.

The lot had long ago been sold for taxes, but John Bentley knew nothing about it. Perhaps the notice had miscarried, or he had received it and had not understood. He thought the lot was his forever.

After a few years he went into the city to look at it. The little, weed-grown lot upon the outskirts had become a part of the city, and on it stood a two-story shop.

He scratched his head. "I guess some one's been building there," he said. "They sure had no right to build on my lot without my leave. I guess they'll have to go when I get ready to sell."

He was doing better with the little farm, and estimated that he had many years of work ahead of him. And it was about this time that an idea came into his mind. He would make the lot a monument to Polly.

He decided, after much thought, that when the value of it had become enormous, he would build a small hospital—the Polly Memorial hospital, he called it in his mind. The idea made him very happy, and he went on hoeing his potatoes.

A few years later, returning to the city, he found that the lot was in the heart of the business region. The shop had gone; in its place stood an office building of seven stories. The click of typewriters could be heard from all the windows. Bentley stood in the street and grinned.

"They sure have a nerve, setting up that place on my lot," he said. "Guess they'll feel pretty mean when I give 'em notice to go. But I want that site for Polly's hospital."

His idea was to mortgage the lot, which must by now be of incalculable value, build the hospital with the proceeds—he had no idea of the cost of this—and get it started, trusting to luck and the good-will of subscribers to keep it going.

The idea had become more or less a monomania. The farm was not doing so well nowadays. The soil was worn out, and Bentley was growing old, and less able to work. When he made his last trip to the city he had hardly anything but his few acres and the old working clothes he stood in.

When he reached the lot he stopped in amazement. The business offices were gone, for the town was now spreading in another direction. In their place stood a magnificent building with a white marble entrance.

For a moment or two old Bentley had misgivings. "Sure they'll have to go," he muttered. "They can't take my lot away from me. They'll have to go."

And then he discovered that the great building was a hospital. He saw nurses at the windows, patients in their beds, looking out into the street. Everything was as he had dreamed, but someone had anticipated him.

It was Polly's hospital! The realization of the dream sent a sudden rush of blood to his head. Bentley staggered, threw out his arms, and dropped unconscious to the sidewalk.

A young interne, who was coming out, saw the crowd that gathered around the unconscious man, and hurried to his side. He saw that Bentley had been struck down by apoplexy. He called the porter, and they carried him inside the hospital and he was put to bed in the public ward.

For days old Bentley lay in a stupor, out of which he emerged to become dimly conscious of the nurses and the doctor.

"No, we can't find out who the old fellow is," the house doctor told the porter. "I guess he'll have to go to the potter's field. Recover? No, he's too far gone for that."

Up in the ward a screen had been drawn around John Bentley's bed. The nurse leaned over him.

"My hospital," she heard him mumble. "Polly's hospital."

"Who's Polly?" asked the nurse.

"They beat me to it, but it's Polly's hospital, isn't it?" whispered John Bentley.

Then he died.

Cats Like It.

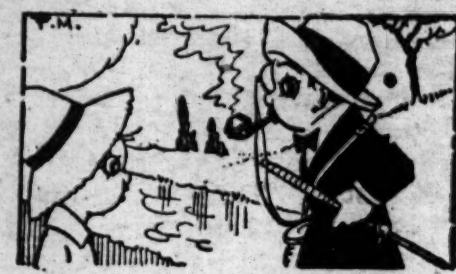

The heir to the family fortunes and misfortunes, under the supposition that "we must stick together," is unwaveringly loyal to Dad, even when that loyalty involves attributing not usually belonging to that side of the household. Mother was considering a vacation trip, and some one asked Son if he and Dad could manage the cooking during her absence.

"Oh, sure," was the ready reply. Dad's a good cook. We can't eat his cooking, but the cats can."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

WHAT SHALL THE HARVEST BE?

We read in Holy Writ that "What ye sow that shall ye also reap." We know that this is true in the physical world. When we sow grains of wheat we do not expect to gather peaches; when we sow cotton seed we do not expect to reap corn. When we stop long enough to consider things we see round about us every day, we realize the correctness of the scriptural statement as to sowing and reaping in what we have seen and observed and what we are seeing and observing in the lives and the character of men and women.

Sit down, if you will, and talk to any contemplative person of mature mind and he will tell you that we are going at a reckless speed, at a speed which means wreck and ruin to many. We are going at such a reckless speed that, figuratively speaking, we must know that our car is going to run off some bridge, or capsized with us or collide with somebody else. The rate so many are driving automobiles is but typical of the life we are leading in spending what we make and what we can borrow and in stifling much of the sweeter and higher things that our Maker wants to assert themselves in our lives. And while almost any one will admit that this is true, let us ask, "Who is doing anything to stop the reckless gait we are traveling, who is hanging out any danger signals?"

We heard a mighty levelheaded, good man say a few days ago that the social demands made stopping in many things more than difficult. He said that the social standards of the day demanded that every man give his family the same conveniences and the same luxuries of the average family, and this, regardless of his financial ability; that the man had to hurry home, hurry back to his desk or to his daily task in order to keep things going at home.

We are taking the following from one of Gov. Patterson's "Day by Day" articles in the Commercial Appeal which deals with the very things we are endeavoring to say:

"In these days there is much to distract and absorb. The problem of living, to get by from day to day, has become a serious one. We do not live our own lives—we live as others want or expect us to live.

"The poor try to live like the rich, and the rich are vieing with one another to find new ways to spend money or discover new pleasures for their cloyed and pampered appetites. Individuality is almost unknown. We have become standardized in thought and action.

"As a people we have become intense in the small things of existence, and our higher mental and spiritual powers are either tangled or tied into hard knots, making it impossible for the free play of sentiment or the nobler forms of aspiration.

"We don't give ourselves time to either think or rest. Books bore us, unless they tell us how to make money.

"The average well-to-do man thinks if he pays his taxes, gives to his church and something to charity that he has done his full duty as a citizen.

"He knows little of government, as often as not never votes, cares nothing about politics, and as a rule is ignorant of the great play of forces which holds society together, and gives him comfort and security."

Oh, it is easy enough to act the part of the ostrich and stick our heads in the sand. It is easy enough to say that things will right themselves in due time. But a glance back at the history of peoples and of nations fails to verify that. The Lord helps those who help themselves; he is ready to do his part, but it is up to us to do ours.

Recently we knew a man to visit a store with the view of purchasing some books for general reading; the dealer stated that his stock of books was not what it used to be, that the coming of the picture show and the automobiles had made the sale of substantial books dwindle alarmingly, and what this dealer said but verifies what Gov. Patterson stated, "BOOKS BORE US UNLESS THEY TELL US HOW TO MAKE MONEY." Is it not well enough to inquire, "Is not the country frantic with pleasure seeking and is it not in a riot to make money and then more money?" "What about the future for our children?"

The world cannot settle its trouble with organizations—if a multiplicity of organizations would bring about order and contentment, it would be here an hundredfold. The main thing that we need is the proper heavenly connections with applied common sense, and if we do not soon get that, let us ask, "What shall the harvest be?"

During the year 1922, 460,000 people left the farms of the country and went to the towns and the cities. The year 1923 will show probably that 600,000 more have migrated from the farms to try town life. But what is the farmer to do? The farmer is the pillar, the mudsill, upon which every other business rests, yet the farmer is getting less for what he does than those engaged in any other business. There is too great a difference between what the farmer sells and what he needs to buy. There was a shortage of 12 per cent of farm labor according to statistics at the close of last year; the shortage will be even greater at the close of the year 1923.

It requires 45 days of labor a year for the average man residing in the country to pay his taxes and 58 days of labor for the average man who lives in a city or a town.

THE REASON WHY.

ow are given some modern epitaphs. They are worth and even committing to memory:
rove his car with a girl in his lap,
re lies the remains of Percival Sapp,

s slumbering here, one William Blake, heard the bell, but had no brake.

death this stone lies William Raines, on the hill, and he had no chains."

re lies the body of William Jay, died maintaining his right of way.

n Smith lies here without his shoes, rove his car while filled with booze."

e's Mary Jane, but not alive, made her Ford do thirty-five."

MORE ABOUT WHAT AILS US

A series of letters on farm problems, written by Mr. B. F. Yoakum, railroad official and publicist, has been published and distributed in pamphlet form. Mr. Yoakum undertakes to meet the contention, prevalent in many farming districts, that the present plight of the farmer is owed to excessive transportation costs. He meets it in rather unusual fashion.

One of the classic examples of rail rates disproportionate to the producers' return upon the product hauled is that cited by New York city's market commissioner. That official declared that on watermelons hauled to New York from the South last summer the grower got six cents per melon, the transportation charge was eighteen cents, while the consumer paid from $1.25 to $1.50. "On this showing the carrier got three times as much as the grower did. Mr. Yoakum invites attention to the vastly greater disparity between growers' and carriers' return combined and the cost of "local distribution" from the New York freight warehouse to the consumer. Figuring the average retail price of the melon at $1.24, he points out that local distribution, commission, profits, etc., between railroad delivery point and consumer totalled an even dollar, as against the six cents for the farmer and the eighteen-cent charge of the rail carrier.

Another widely published "example" dealt with cabbages shipped from the Rio Grande valley to Chicago. The grower it is related, got $7 per ton, transportation cost $28, icing $7—and the consumer paid at the rate of $140 per ton. Here again Mr. Yoakum points to the $98 charge for local distribution as much further out of proportion to the grower's return than were the transportation and icing charges combined.

"There is now," he asserts, "one dealer in food supplies of all kinds to each 1 3-4 of the 6,500,000 farmers of the country. A correction of existing unfair methods can only be made practical and effective," he concludes, "through legislation that will enable individuals and co-operative marketing and farm organizations to know how many commissions, profits, etc., are charged against their goods, to whom paid, and the character of service performed by each agent between the farmer and consumer."

Co-operative marketing legislation has been enacted. Simplification of the processes of distribution would reduce their cost. It can be brought about better by effectively organized co-operation than by legislation. Some of the farmers are making a good start at it. But the widely prevalent obsession that there is a legislative cure for every economic ill largely diverts the attention of producers and consumers alike from truly effective remedies compounded of self-reliance, common sense and co-operation.—N. O. Times Picayune.

GRENADA SHOULD HAVE TRAFFIC LAWS,

There are certainly enough automobiles in and around Grenada to make the enactment of strict traffic laws an urgent necessity. Nearly every day or two some kind of accident is occurring on the streets, most of which could be avoided if there were any kind of traffic rules. We have a few laws as to parking, going to the right, driving without lights, etc., but it is a rare instance, indeed, when one of them is enforced. We had just as well not have any at all if the officers whose duty is to see that the public obeys these laws do not enforce them. When a driver violates a traffic ordinance he should be brought before the mayor regardless of who he is.

On Saturdays in Grenada, parking rules would serve to greatly relieve the congestion on all the business streets. It takes a careful driver to avoid collisions when the town is full of cars, wagons and other vehicles none of which follows any set rule as to stopping or turning.

It is much safer to drive on the streets of Memphis where there are traffic regulations than to drive in Grenada where there are many less automobiles and where there are no rules. It will remain so until traffic laws are enacted and enforced.

TWO WOMEN IN THE LEGISLATURE.

Mississippi could not have picked out of her womanhood two women who have been more active towards securing suffrage for women than Miss Belle Kearney, who goes to the State Senate from Madison County, and Mrs. Somerville, who goes to the lower house of the legislature from Washington County. They represent what is termed the forward thought of womanhood. They will be alert and active in the legislature, and inasmuch as the women have played such a conspicuous part in the Mississippi's political redemption, it is but fitting and proper that these two distinguished women should sit in the next law-making body. They will render good service.

In this connection we are reminded of a letter we read some weeks ago from Miss Kearney and which was published in the Madison County Herald, in which she discussed very lucidly some features of our taxing system. We were impressed with the idea she advanced that there was nothing sacred from the tax-gatherer. She insisted that there were some things that ought not to be profaned by being listed for taxes. We confess that we think there is much merit in Senator Kearney's suggestion.

WE SHOULD GO TO JAPAN'S AID.

It would be a splendid thing if the people of Grenada would respond to President Coolidge's appeal to help the people of Japan who are suffering from the effects of the greatest catastrophe that has come upon the world since time began. That country has just been visited by earthquake, wind, flood and fire all at the same time; cities have been wiped off the face of the earth and hundreds of thousands of human beings have lost their lives. Food stores have been destroyed and the inhabitants are on the verge of starvation.

When San Francisco was wrecked by earthquake, $100,000 was immediately forwarded from Japan for relief purposes. This country should not forget and should go at once to the relief of distressed Japan.

The Sentinel will be glad to handle all contributions that Grenada citizens might wish to make and forward all contributions to the headquarters of the American Red Cross. Or the funds could be sent through the local chapter of the Red Cross.

ABSENT VOTER LAW SHOULD STAY.

We note emanations from a few quarters, and particularly is this true from those who were licked horse, foot and dragon in the last primaries, that the Absent Voter law should be repealed. It would be a step backwards to repeal the law. No one can vote who is not absent from his or her county at the time of the election and who is not otherwise legally qualified to vote. The law throws every safeguard around the absent voter ballot, and if the law is violated, it is the fault of the officers of the election.

The voter who is necessarily absent from home, who is called away by business, sickness or some important duty, should not be denied the exercise of the right to vote. Of course the voter who moves in a narrow sphere and who has no duties that carry him beyond the confines of his own neighborhood, does not need to avail himself of the absent voter ballot.

Let the law stand. If there are any loop holes, amend the statute, but let us not turn our faces backward.

THE ASSET OF A GOOD NAME

The race Mr. H. D. Money made for the office of Lt. Governor once again shows what it is to bear a good name and to have a father who engaged the confidence and the esteem of his fellow citizens.

Mr. Money entered the race about a month and half previous to the first primary, yet in that short time, he was able to get over 100,000 voters to say that they wanted him for their next Lt. Governor. He never could have mustered that vote in so short a time, had he not been named Money. His father was born in the good old county of Carroll, and for a number of years was a member of the lower house of Congress from this district. He was chosen United States Senator to succeed J. Z. George, one of Mississippi's greatest men. Senator Money was regarded as being one of the best posted men in Congress. He left as a legacy to his children a fine record as a public servant and as a true and loyal man and dependable. Without intending in the least to discredit the son who was the candidate this year, there is hardly any one who would venture to say that he could have done half so well had not his illustrious father blazed the pathway he did for him.

When Mr. Money first became a candidate, suggestions came from almost at his door that he was persuaded into the race by Lee Russell. And an eleventh hour announcement gave color to this charge, nevertheless it was hard to believe that a Money could be beguiled by a man of Russell's type, and the progress of the campaign proved the fallacy of this allegation. He made a creditable race.

SOMETHING NEW.

Numerous and exhaustive and learned treatises on retarded school children and retarded college students have been written and published in educational magazines. Mental tests and intelligence quotients galore have been applied to these children and students. But School and Society in the June 30 issue presents a scientific study of "The Retarded College Professor." The fact that there can be such a thing as a retarded college professor will doubtless be news to many. The retarded pupils will be glad to take a rest while the psychologists experiment for a time on the retarded professor.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

ADVERTISING A PRICE OF SUCCESS.

Dr. George Long, of the University of Alabama, recently told a Rotary Club that "an inevitable price of success is that you advertise in the newspapers." We just want to say that the statement applies to the Church and Church work as well as other institutions. Newspaper publicity, paid advertisements as well as news, that tells the truth about the Church does help in advancing the work of the church, and ministers and other church leaders who do not use the newspapers, Church newspapers and secular newspapers, are falling short of the success it is possible for them to achieve.—Ex.

"A man's life is the expression of his dominant interest. To some the world is a playground. To others it is an arena where one strives for mastery. To others it is a stage for mock heroics, and to still others it is a countinghouse where one seeks health. It is not a real nor abiding world, and there is little room for God in it. Those who would know reality must find another world where God reigns and love is his law." —Selected.

A large per cent of men want to live square with their God and their fellowman, and the reason that they seem to stray far away from that path so often is because of the lack of initiative and of will power. Never before in the history of the world did right thinking, good men need to assert their individuality so much as today.

A man that hath no virtue in himself ever envieth virtue in others; for men's minds will either feed upon their own good, or upon others' evil; and who wanteth the one will prey upon the other; and whose is not of hope to attain to another's virtue will seek to come at even hand, by depressing another's fortune. —Bacon.

Let it be hoped that the next legislature will not consider that the best record it can make is one of law-increasing. There are some few dozen needful things that should be done, and many dozens of statutes that should be wiped off the books.

We imagine that Gov.-elect Whitfield plans a moving day for several in Mississippi who have been sucking the public teat for a number of years. Even a half-way house cleaning is impossible without giving some their walking papers.

"We have very little place in our modern civilization for the poor who are old. They do not arouse the pity that the little child does. There is no place for them in your homes any more." —Selected.

"We cannot know all of God's plan, but we can know enough to live fruitful lives, and we may have faith enough to be sure of his eternal companionship." —Selected.

FRAZIER-CLARK

At twelve o'clock noon on Monday, Sept. 3, marriage vows were solemnized between Mr. Winston Frazier and Miss Elizabeth Clark, Rev. H. G. Roberts saying the ceremony, which was performed at the home of the groom's sister, Mrs. T. E. Trussell, in Grenada.

The groom was reared in the eastern portion of Grenada County and is a young man of fine qualities and trustworthy character. He is employed at Carpenter's Store in the Misteiton community and enjoys the confidence of all who know him.

The bride is an exceptionally attractive young woman and is possessed of many splendid attributes of character. She was reared in Carroll County and comes from an excellent family.

The Sentinel extends congratulations and best wishes.

MISS WILLIAM KARL HOLLAND

Funeral services were conducted Monday, Sept. 3, at Bethel Church near Sabougla in Calhoun County, for Miss Williams Karl Holland, aged 32, who died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Holland, at Yazoo City. She passed away at ten-thirty o'clock Sunday night, the cause of her death being malaria.

Miss Holland was born and reared in the eastern portion of Grenada County and her parents just a few years ago moved to the delta from Grenada. She was a most estimable woman, a lovely christian character, of a sweet and gracious disposition and her death leaves a place that cannot be filled in the hearts of her distressed loved ones.

Besides her parents, she leaves one brother, five sisters and numerous other relatives to mourn her loss, to whom The Sentinel tenders its sincerest sympathy.

FLORIDA BLOSSOMS
TOMORROW NIGHT

The lovers of good, high-class, clean negro minstrelsy will be pleased to know that the well-known Florida Blossoms Minstrels will show in Grenada tomorrow (Saturday) night on the Hoffa lot on Depot Street. A splendid band and orchestra is carried by the organization, a double quartette and ten real comedians who will furnish you "miles of smiles." The management states that the entertainment is free from every semblance of vulgarity and crude comedy and that their show is one that can and will be enjoyed by every member of the family. Read their announcement in this week's paper.

LAWRENCE YEAGER IS GRATEFUL

I want to thank the voters of Grenada County, and especially the ladies, for the splendid vote given me in the Democratic primaries for Tax Assessor which gave me the election over so worthy an opponent. I feel that you have signally honored me and I shall endeavor to the utmost of my ability to serve you honestly, faithfully and well during the term of my office so that none will regret having chosen me. To those who voted for my opponent, I want to say that I still consider that you are my friends and I bear no ill will or malice toward any of you and shall try to serve all alike.

Gratefully yours,
LAWRENCE N. YEAGER

A Wonderful Remedy

"When all other remedies have failed, Leonard's Blood Elixir cured me." People in every city and town where this remedy is sold make this straightforward statement. Grateful testimonials of men and women who have suffered from diseases caused by impure blood, such as Rheumatism, Catarrh, Blood Poison, Scrofulous affection, Ulcers, Nervous Debility, and run-down condition is what has made Leonard's Blood Elixir the one remedy which stands out as the greatest blood medicine of the Twentieth Century.

The remedy makes rich, red blood. It builds up the system and gives new energy and vigor to the sick and weak. If you need a blood medicine buy Leonard's Blood Elixir. It always gives results. Sold by 2d Class Drug Store

EARLY MORNING FIRE SUNDAY

Early Sunday morning, about one-thirty o'clock, fire was discovered in the building occupied by the Third Street Grocery Co. near the compress and the blaze had gained good headway when the fire department reached the scene. Practically the entire stock of goods was a complete loss while the building suffered considerable damage. Both the stock and the building were insured. The building is owned by J. M. Brown and his coal and feed offices are in the half not used by the grocery. The origin of the fire is unknown.

LESSON FOR SEPTEMBER 9

JOHN MARK

LESSON TEXT—Mark 14:51-52; Acts 12:12; 25-13:5; Acts 15:36-40; II Tim. 4:11.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Whoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might."—Eccles. 9:10.

PRIMARY TOPIC—John Mark, One of Paul's Helpers.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Man Who Failed and Tried Again.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Warning and Encouragement From the Life of Mark.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Mark's Contribution to Christianity.

I. Mark's Home Life (Acts 12:12).

He had the wholesome influence of a Christian home, for his mother was a godly woman. There is no heritage to be compared to that of a godly home. Nothing has such a far-reaching influence upon the life of a young man as the memory of a praying mother. Even when it was so perilous to be known as a follower of Jesus, she was not afraid to have a prayer meeting in her home.

II. Mark With Jesus in Gethsemane (Mark 14:51, 52).

At the sight of the Roman guard, the disciples "all forsook Him and fled." This timid lad still followed the Lord till laid hold on by the young men. He then fled, leaving behind him his linen garment. This Gethsemane experience doubtless had a decided effect upon his life.

III. Mark a Servant of Paul and Barnabas (Acts 12:25-13:5).

Mark was with the company when Peter told of his wonderful release from prison. This, doubtless, made a great impression upon him and was the beginning of his desire to accompany the missionaries of the cross. He was not a missionary on the same footing as Paul and Barnabas, but an attendant upon them to look after their needs.

IV. Mark Deserting Paul and Barnabas (Acts 13:13).

We are not told the cause of this desertion. Three conjectures, one or all of which had a bearing upon his action, are offered.

1. Homesickness. His home was of easy circumstances if not wealthy. As they were carrying the gospel into the rough, mountainous country, occupied by rough, half-civilized people, the mettle of this young servant was tried. We ought not to condemn him too readily, for we know how trying it is to leave home when struggling against the rough world. While sympathizing with him, we must remember that duty is stronger than the tender ties of life. The time comes when the soldier must spurn the ties which bind him to father, mother, wife and children, in response to the call of duty. The missionary must turn his back upon home, native land, and friends in his devotion to his Lord.

2. Disbelief in Foreign Missions. There was a common prejudice among the Jews against taking the gospel to the Gentiles. When he saw that these missionaries were going to the "regions beyond," his prejudice may have caused him to turn back.

3. Cowardice. The dangers before them were not imaginary but real. The missionary today faces awful dangers: climate, wild beasts, deadly serpents and insects, and savage and cannibalistic men. However, fear is no excuse for cowardice because we are linked to the Almighty by faith; there is nothing in heaven or on earth that can harm us. Courage is required of those who would do the Lord's work.

V. Mark With Peter in Babylon (I Pet. 5:13).

Some years after Mark's desertion, when Paul and Barnabas were arranging for a second evangelistic tour, they had a sharp dispute over the question of taking Mark with them. Paul would not consent to Mark's accompanying them, so "they departed asunder one from the other." Mark went with his uncle. By this time he must have been cured of his cowardice for we see him associated with Peter in Babylon.

VI. Mark Honored by Paul (II Tim. 4:11).

Paul is now an old man in prison. Mark is a middle-aged man associated with Timothy at Ephesus. Mark had proved himself, for Paul gives the pleasing testimony that "he is profitable unto me for the ministry." Mark is an example of one who made good in spite of his early backsliding.

Heroism.

The world's battlefields have been in the heart chiefly; more heroism has been displayed in the household and the closet than on the most memorable battlefields of history.—H. W. Beecher.

You Must Be Calm.

The language of excitement is at best but picturesque merely. You must be calm before you can utter oracles.—Thoreau.

Little People.

I love these little people and it is not a slight thing, when they, who are so fresh from God, love us.—Dickens.

Greatness and Truth.

If any man seeks for greatness, let him forget greatness and ask for truth, and he will find both.—Horace Mann.

LESSON FOR SEPTEMBER 16

LUKE, THE BELOVED PHYSICIAN

LESSON TEXT—Luke 1:1-4; Acts 1:1; Acts 16:9-15; Col. 4:14; II Tim. 4:11.

GOLDEN TEXT—"A friend loveth at all times and a brother is born for adversity."—Prov. 17:17.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Luke's Story of the Great Physician.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Luke, Paul's Friend.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Luke Helped Paul.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Luke's Contribution to Christianity.

I. Luke the Historian (Luke 1:1; cf. Acts 1:1).

Luke was a writer of great distinction. His style is clear and picturesque. The pieces of writing left us are the Gospel of Luke and the Acts. According to Acts 1:1, the gospel was written to set down in order the things which Jesus began to do and to teach, and Acts 1:3 to show what the risen and ascended Lord was continuing to do and to teach. While here on earth He only began to do and to show certain things, but from His place of glorious exaltation, He is continuing His mighty work by the Holy Spirit through the disciples. Concerning the contents of the gospel, he asserts first, that the source of his information was recorded statements of eye witnesses. He assures us that these statements have been verified by him. Second, that he had made a systematic statement of these facts in order to strengthen the faith of his friend, Theophilus.

II. Luke the Beloved Physician (Col. 4:14).

He evidently was a skilled physician as his descriptions of the diseases which Jesus cured shows. His description of the symptoms of the diseases shows his capability. It was left to the physician to portray with vivid exactness the virgin birth by means of which the Eternal Son became incarnate. He was not only skillful but tenderly sympathetic. This sympathy is shown in his portrayal of the Great Physician in His compassion for the poor, helpless and suffering people. What untold good a skillful and sympathetic Christian physician can do! No one gets so closely into touch with human life as a doctor.

III. Luke the Companion of Paul (Acts 16:9-15).

1. Paul's Need of a Physician. There is clear evidence that Paul had some physical ailment which made the service of a skillful physician most desirable. When the call came to go to Europe with the gospel, Luke joined Paul and became one of his most helpful companions. This is one example of what a faithful Christian physician can do.

2. Luke's Fidelity. "Only Luke is with me." He was no mere far-away friend. He stood by Paul in storm and calm. Paul was now in the cold jail awaiting execution. What a great comfort it must have been to know that this faithful physician was with him. He was with him at Philippi, Miletus, Jerusalem, Caesarea, before Felix and Festus, on the voyage to Rome, with him in the Roman jail, through the Roman trial, and perhaps a spectator of his execution. It cost Luke a great deal to do this, but he no doubt considered it a labor of love, even feeling the call of God as really as Paul. Nothing is known of Luke after Paul's death. Tradition has some interesting things to say, but no word of certainty.

Courage.

Fear God, and take your own part. There's Bible in that, young man; see how Moses feared God, and how he took his own part against everybody who meddled with him. And see how David feared God, and took his own part. . . . So fear God, young man, and never give in! The world can bully, and is fond, provided it sees a man in a kind of difficulty, of getting about him, calling him coarse names, and even going so far as to hustle him; but the world, like all bullies, carries a white feather in its tail, and no sooner sees the man taking off his coat, and offering to fight its best, than it scatters here and there, and is always civil to him afterwards.—Borrow.

When a Man Gets Angry.

The man of patience and of righteous purpose accomplishes something worth while when he gets angry. Every ounce of his energy is gathered and directed toward a good result. It is the moral steam controlled and made to hit a definite piston that sends this old world upward and onward.

Blind Fanaticism.

The blind fanaticism of one foolish honest man may cause more evil than the united efforts of twenty rogues.—Grimm.

Forgiveness or Sin.

Said General Oglethorpe to Wesley, "I never forgive." "Then I hope, sir," said Wesley, "you never sin."

Forgiveness.

Two persons cannot long be friends if they cannot forgive each other's little failings.—Bruyere.

BACK BAD TODAY

Backache is usually kidney-ache and makes you dull, nervous and tired. Use Doan's Kidney Pills for weak kidneys—the remedy recommended by your friends and neighbors. Ask your neighbors.

Mrs. Mary Tribble, 207 Green St., Grenada, says: "I know Doan's Kidney Pills are a good medicine as they have been used in our home with beneficial results. I always use them for a disordered condition of my kidneys. My kidneys were weak and caused a lot of annoyance. I had occasional attacks of backache, too. After I began using Doan's Kidney Pills relief followed. I gladly recommend Doan's."

The above statement was given June 14, 1918 and on April 12, 1922, Mrs. Tribble added: "It was surprising to find how soon Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of kidney trouble several years ago. Since then I have only used them occasionally to flush my kidneys. They have kept my kidneys healthy. I cannot praise Doan's too highly."

Worth Its Weight in Gold

No other remedy gives new strength, energy and vitality to the weak and run-down like Leonard's Blood Elixir. Its remarkable power over disease lies in the fact that it enriches and purifies the blood so that its vital fluid circulates through the body, replacing worn-out tissues and building up new, healthy ones.

The tired body feels the strengthening effects of Leonard's Blood Elixir with almost the first dose. It is especially valuable for giving new strength to men and women of advanced age. It restores spent energy and vitality. It is the one remedy worthy of the name of a true blood purifier. It builds up the system, regulates the nerves and restores health and strength. Leonard's Blood Elixir cures Rheumatism, Catarrh, Blood Poison and all diseases of blood. Makes rich, red blood.

THE MISSES STEVENS NOT IN STRICKEN AREA

Grenada Girls in Japan Not in Section Visited by Earthquake, Typhoon, Flood and Fire.

The reading public is familiar with the story of the disasters that have just been visited upon the country of Japan and its terrible consequences. Hundreds of thousands have perished and much fear is felt over the fate of Americans who are in that country.

Misses Katherine and Julia Stevens, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. I. M. Stevens, two Grenada girls who are doing missionary work in Japan, are located in an area that has not suffered from these disasters. The stricken section is on the coast of Japan and they are several hundred miles in the interior. The relatives and many friends of these two splendid young women are relieved to know that they are not in the danger zone.

L. T. HAYDEN

EXPRESSES THANKS

To the Voters of Beat 5, my friends, and especially the ladies: I take this opportunity of thanking each and every one of you for the loyal support given me in the last primary election in which I was elected Supervisor from District 5. I shall feel under lasting obligations to you all and shall endeavor to show my appreciation by strict attention to the duties of the office.

Yours very truly,
L. T. HAYDEN.

Holcomb, Miss, Sept. 1, 1923.

BOSTWICK PLAYERS

HERE ALL NEXT WEEK

Elsewhere in The Sentinel this week may be seen the announcement of the Bostwick Players coming to Grenada for a week's engagement commencing next Monday, Sept. 10. The repertoire consists of high-class, clean comedies and dramas and the kinds of shows that will be presented are those that will appeal to the people of this territory. This organization has previously shown in Grenada and made a most pleasing impression on all who had the pleasure of attending a performance. The company is made up of ladies and gentlemen and the management promises that a good, clean show will be presented every night.
